

December 10, 2021

Hon. Michelle Bachelet
Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights
Palais des Nations
CH-1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Amb. Nazhat Shameem Khan
President, United Nations Human Rights Council
Palais des Nations
CH-1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

Dear Commissioner Bachelet and Ambassador Khan,

Seventy-three years ago today, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) envisioned a world where the “inherent dignity” and “equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family” are fully recognized. As the largest federation of pro-life organizations in the United States, we—the National Right to Life Committee and its 50 state affiliates—have for decades pursued this vision through our work defending human beings in utero and supporting their mothers.

Yet in recent weeks, “human rights experts” from the United Nations have egregiously sought to infringe on the sovereignty of U.S. states to protect the human rights of unborn children. In a press release, for example, UN appointees “denounced” a Texas law protecting unborn children with detectable heartbeats. These UN representatives called the law “alarming,” claimed that it “violates women’s fundamental human rights,” and lamented that this year U.S. states have enacted “a historic number of highly restrictive abortion laws.” They concluded that “the United States stands in violation of international law.”

Many of the same UN mandate holders, in an unprecedented act of interference, filed a brief in the U.S. Supreme Court case Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health Organization, which concerns a Mississippi law protecting unborn children after 15 weeks gestation. The UN brief says that “international human rights law should guide the Supreme Court,” and claims that protections for unborn children are violations of “the United States’ obligations under the human rights treaties it has signed and ratified.”

That is absolutely false. No United Nations treaty can plausibly be interpreted to require the legality of elective abortion. No right to abortion has ever been established in international law. (In fact, the vast majority of nations provide greater legal protection for unborn children than the U.S. does.) The UN brief cites highly ideological opinions issued by UN treaty bodies and other UN groups and individuals, but such opinions are non-binding and are not the same as the agreed-upon treaties themselves. The brief even acknowledges that such opinions arose “over time” following ratification of the treaties. It is only the treaties—not the revisionist interpretations and recommendations of certain UN personnel—that were ratified and that impose obligations.

The UN’s brief also appeals to the International Conference on Population and Development (ICPD) and the Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action. But neither is legally binding, and neither provides support for abortion in any case. The ICPD Program of Action, for example, states: “In no case should abortion be promoted as a method of family planning. ... Any measures or changes related to abortion within the health system can only be determined at the national or local level according to the national legislative process” (section 8.25).

The so-called “experts” from the UN are flagrantly trying to usurp this national legislative authority on the basis of false claims about international law. They have sought to do the same in many other countries as well. We will not stand for it.

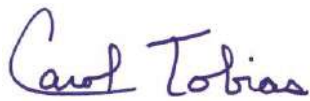

Far from supporting unlimited abortion, international human rights instruments—such as the UDHR, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), and the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC)—support the equal protection of human beings at all developmental stages and in all conditions. The ICCPR states, “Every human being has the inherent right to life. This right shall be protected by law. No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his life” (Article 6.1). The CRC affirms that “the child ... needs special safeguards and care, including appropriate legal protection, before as well as after birth” (preamble).

Today, December 10, is Human Rights Day. On this day and every day, we remember that human rights don’t depend on meeting some set of arbitrary criteria. They don’t depend on our age, or our size, or our ability, or the opinions of other people. They are not exclusive to the strong and the independent. Rather, each one of us has human rights simply because we are human. This is the message of the Universal Declaration. Human rights belong to everyone.

And that’s why they belong to unborn children. Human embryos and fetuses are living members of the species Homo sapiens at the earliest stages of their lives. They are human beings like us. This is a fact of biology. If all human beings have human rights, then unborn human beings have human rights. If everyone matters, then they matter too.

At the National Right to Life Committee and across all 50 states, our mission is to advocate for the human rights of these vulnerable members of the human family. We will not stop until they receive the respect and protection they deserve.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink that reads "Carol Tobias". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Carol Tobias
President, National Right to Life

Please see attached sheet representing our affiliates in the 50 states and the District of Columbia.

Alabama Citizens for Life

Pro-Life Alaska

Arizona Right to Life

Arkansas Right to Life

California ProLife Council

Colorado Citizens for Life

Pro-Life Council of Connecticut

Delaware Citizens for Life

DC Metro Life Alliance

Florida Right to Life

Georgia Life Alliance

Hawaii Life Alliance

Right to Life of Idaho

Illinois Federation for Right to Life

Indiana Right to Life

Iowa Right to Life

Kansans for Life

Kentucky Right to Life

Louisiana Right to Life

Maine Right to Life

Maryland Right to Life

Massachusetts Citizens for Life

Right to Life of Michigan

Minnesota Citizens Concerned for Life

Mississippi Right to Life

Missouri Right to Life

Right to Life of Montana

Nebraska Right to Life

Nevada Right to Life

Citizens for Life

New Jersey Committee for Life

Right to Life Committee of New Mexico

New York State Right to Life Committee

North Carolina Right to Life

North Dakota Right to Life

Ohio Right to Life

Oklahomans for Life

Oregon Right to Life

Pennsylvania Pro-Life Federation

Rhode Island State Right to Life Committee

South Carolina Citizens for Life

South Dakota Right to Life

Tennessee Right to Life

Texas Right to Life

Right to Life of Utah

Vermont Right to Life Committee

Virginia Society for Human Life

Human Life of Washington

West Virginians for Life

Wisconsin Right to Life

Wyoming Citizens for Life